2. To support the learning and professional development of users by offering access to educational materials, training resources, research papers, and other knowledge tools.
3. To offer resources that promote and enable research, helping users stay informed about the latest developments
4. To provide decision-makers with accurate, up-to-date information that supports critical decisions

Activities run under Field Visit Programme

A library visit serves multiple purposes, offering a wealth of opportunities for personal and educational growth. One of the primary reasons to visit a library is to access knowledge. Libraries house a vast collection of books, journals, and digital resources that cater to a wide range of topics. Whether for academic purposes, personal interest, or research, libraries provide invaluable resources for earning.

For students and lifelong learners, libraries are vital educational hubs. They offer textbooks, reference arterials, and specialized content that support various fields of study. Additionally, libraries foster literacy by promoting reading habits, improving vocabulary, and encouraging intellectual curiosity. Another key benefit of visiting a library is the opportunity for research. Libraries provide access to specialized databases, archives, and expert resources that may not be available elsewhere. These resources help individuals conduct thorough research for school projects, professional tasks, or personal exploration. Libraries also promote cultural enrichment by offering materials that expand one's understanding of history, art, and literature. In doing so, they preserve and share valuable cultural heritage. Finally, libraries offer a quiet, conducive environment for studying or working. They also host community events, workshops, and discussions, creating spaces for social engagement and connection. In summary, a library visit is an essential way to gain knowledge, support education, enhance literacy. In this event, the students were taken to the Knowledge Research Centre. After going there, the librarian of the library, Mr. Throat Sir, guided the students on how to find books and how to study various research books. Similarly, Professor Tonde Sir & Prof. Pardhi Sir gave information to the students on how to use magazines in their courses. Mr. Thorat Sir gave information to the children on how to find online books through the Internet through the computer. Similarly, the students were given information on how to use the library or how to handle course books through this field visit. 25 students participated in this.

Conclusion:

library visit is a powerful tool for personal and intellectual growth. It provides access to a wealth of knowledge, fosters learning, and supports research across various disciplines. Libraries not only nurture literacy and encourage reading habits but also offer a quiet space for study and promote cultural understanding. By hosting community events, libraries also serve as social hubs that connect individuals. Ultimately, libraries play a crucial role in enriching lives, making them indispensable centers of learning and community engagement.
